EAGLE HISTORY

A BRIEF HISTORY OF EAGLE

Learn about Eagle's early Days...

The history of the Eagle area begins with prehistoric hunter-gatherers who were in the region as early as about 12,000 years ago. By the late 1800's, EuroAmerican explorers and trappers had arrived. New boomtowns with names like Redcliff, Astor City, Gold Park and Holy Cross City sprang up in the Upper Eagle River Valley as word spread nationwide about gold and silver strikes. Thousands of hopeful prospectors came for a chance at a fortune. One of these enterprising individuals was named

Williams Edwards, who in the mid-1880s bought a 156-acre site at the confluence of the Eagle River and Brush Creek. He declared the parcel to be a town and named it Castle. After a few name changes, Castle would become Eagle and would serve for more than a century as the commercial hub for the surrounding mining, ranching and agricultural communities. Eagle itself was a farming and ranching community, raising cattle, hay and potatoes.

The Town's early years were marked by a number of interesting events. The Town's carousel of changing names included Brush, Eagle River Crossing (to freight and stage drivers), Rio Aquilla, Spanish for "Eagle River," and McDonald. By the mid 1890s, with the moniker Eagle firmly and finally in place, the Town had begun to take on the trappings of a full-fledged community. It had its own newspaper, the Eagle County Examiner, and was becoming home to a rapidly growing number of businesses. The Denver & Rio Grande Railroad came to Eagle in 1887, and in 1900, with a Town population of 124, the Methodist Church was built. The Town was officially platted and incorporated in 1905.

Throughout the first several decades of the Town's existence there was a move to have Eagle replace Redcliff as the county seat. In 1921 the voters approved the measure. The first electric lights appeared on July 5, 1927. By this time, Broadway had taken on an appearance similar to what it is today.

Eagle has always maintained a cohesive community spirit, one that often shone brightest in early days at Woodman Hall. Opened in 1936 and located where the present-day Brush Creek Saloon stands, this fraternal order served as a community gathering place and cultural center of sorts. Fourth of July celebrations also bonded the community, as did the annual Eagle County Fair and, later, Eagle Flight Days, all of which continue today.

EAGLE, COLORADO

A traditional western small Town

Eagle has been part of the rapid growth of Eagle County. Its close proximity to internationally renowned resorts and a bustling airport brought the world to the Town's doorstep. While the increased sophistication of technology, ease of transportation and growth in population and wealth led to the loss of the historical character in much of the West, Eagle has retained its historical roots. Although its population is now nearly 6,800, in many ways it is still a traditional western small Town.

The Eagle County Historical Society has placed signs at some of the more interesting buildings and sites in Eagle, noting their historic aspects. To view a map of these locations, visit Eagle County Historical Society <https://eaglecountyhistoricalociety.com/honoring-historic-eagle/>
